ABOUT DHRUBA CHAND HALDER COLLEGE

Dhruba Chand Halder College, established in 1965 as Dakshin Barasat College, assumed its present name in 1968 in honour of Dr. Dhruba Chand Halder, one of its key benefactors. The institution was founded through the dedicated efforts of a group of visionary and educated individuals committed to expanding access to higher education in the region.

The college received generous support from Dr. Dhruba Chand Halder and Srimati Baruni Devi, while Mr. Nanda Kishore Ghosh, a former member of the University of Calcutta Senate, played a crucial role in securing its affiliation. He also served as the first President of the Governing Body. The college hostel, Baruni Chhatrabas, stands as a tribute to Srimati Baruni Devi's contribution.

Initially, classes were conducted at Dakshin Barasat Shibdas Acharya High School. Following the construction of its own building, the college shifted to its present campus in 1968. Since then, it has continued to grow as a centre of learning, fostering academic excellence and serving the educational needs of the surrounding rural and semi-urban communities.
